WILLISTON on the Law Governing Sales of Goods AT COMMON LAW AND UNDER THE UNIFORM SALES ACT

By SAMUEL WILLISTON (Weld Professor of Law in Harvard University), Draftsman of the Uniform Sales Act for the National Conference of Commissioners for Uniform State Laws.

The text of this book contains a logical and coherent statement of the Law of Sales, not a mere digest of the decisions stated without reference to their bearing upon each other. The notes contain not simply fun citations of authorities, but such statements of the facts involved in important cases and such quotations from judicial opinions as to enable the reader to test the author's conclusions by the language and decisions of the courts. The book is by the author of the Sales Act, and furnishes the best guide to the meaning of that Act which is available before it is construed by the courts. The Act has already been passed in Arizona, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio, Rhode Island, and the passage by other states seems probable. As the Act is in the main a codification of existing Common Law, it seemed appropriate to the design of explaining the meaning of the Act to treat fully the Common Law of Sales. Accordingly, the book treats exhaustively the Law of Sales as it exists where the Sales Act has not been passed. In such jurisdictions the provisions of the Act, though not having the force of a statute, conveniently summarize the Common Law.

The important subject of Sales and Pledges by means of bills of lading and warehouse receipts has been treated with especial fullness, and it is believed that the author's treatment simplifies a somewhat difficult branch of the law. As draftsman for the National Conference of Commissioners for Uniform State Laws, not only of the Sales Act, but of the Warehouse Receipts Act (now passed by ten states, including New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Iowa and Ohio), and of a bill to make uniform the law governing bills of lading, and as counsel for the Committee on Bills of Lading of the American Banker's Association, the author has had exceptional opportunities of discussing with railroad men, warehousemen and bankers, as well as with lawyers and legislators, the practical as well as the legal aspects of bills of lading and warehouse receipts. The portions of the book devoted to this topic are believed to be of great importance.

The subject of delivery by the buyer and retention of possession by the seller, which has been the subject of many and conflicting decisions, has been treated with greater fullness than in any other work. The law of each state is separately stated, and its decisions fully collected.

Williston on Sales is a large octavo volume, of about 1,400 pages, handsomely bound in canvas. Price $7.50 net, but sent by express, prepaid, on receipt of the amount.

THE CONTROL OF PUBLIC UTILITIES

By WILLIAM M. IVINS and HERBERT DELAVAN MASON, of the New York Bar

In the form of an Annotation of the Public Service Commissions Law of the State of New York, and covering all important American cases whether or not within the scope of the Act, together with the text of the Federal Interstate Commerce Act and the Rapid Transit Act of New York, with elaborate indexes of the same and numerous comparative notes and cross references to parallel provisions in the several Acts.

The book is designed as a working volume, adequately indexed, which brings together, in their relation to the New York Law, all cases decided by our American courts in the matter of the regulation of Public Utilities Corporations. It in fact constitutes an elaborate digest of the entire jurisprudence of the subject.

In one large octavo volume of 1,230 pages, law canvas binding. Price $7.00, delivered on receipt of the amount.

NIMS on the Law of Unfair Business Competition

By HARRY D. NIMS, of the New York Bar.

This book is the first of its kind which deals with the equitable principles applicable to all sorts of unfair methods of competition in business, a division of the law which has been largely developed in the last few years. The extent of the protection which the law now affords and the facility with which this protection may be availed of against the many injuries suffered by manufacturers and merchants at the hands of unscrupulous competitors, is not generally realized.

The volume discusses fully the power of equity to enjoin (without the delays incident to damage suits) the unfair use of names, of goods, of persons, places, partnerships and corporations; the misuse of trade secrets, the copying of the form and shape of manufactured articles, fraudulent trading on the good will of others, unfair imitation of signs, letters, numerals, labels, wrappers, bottles and containers of all kinds; the utterance of false and untrue statements as to credit and as to the quality, source, manufacture, or merit of goods; the fraudulent and unfair, interference with the contracts and business of others by such means as threats; all phases of unfair competition, as decided by the courts within the last few years.

Nims on Unfair Business Competition is a fine octavo volume, bound in buckram. Price, $6.50 net, but delivered by express, prepaid, upon receipt of the amount.

Digests Scatter

YOU cannot practice law without using Digests and other publications which depend for their usefulness upon the classification of a large number of legal points.

The value of any classification of legal decisions to you depends on the personal equation in a double sense. The compiler's ideas as to classification are one factor, and your ideas on the same subject are another factor. If there is any variation between these two factors, you will not find the decisions you are seeking. The result is that an extremely small percentage of Digest users ever find all the cases applying to their subject which the book really contains. Digesters scatter the decisions through different subjects by reason of their conflicting ideas as to classification.

A NOTE in Lawyers Reports Annotated has just the opposite effect. Their subjects are, in the first place, just the kind of points you have in a brief. The editor who writes a note is peculiarly fitted, by training and experience, to gather together from all the varied classifications, the cases bearing on that point. To take a very simple illustration, suppose a line-man to be injured by reason of some defect in a pole supporting electric wires. You might look for the principles governing such a set of facts under "Employer's Liability," another might look among cases under "Fellow Servants," another under "Assumed Risk," and another under "Contributory Negligence," and so on. L.R.A. editors would look in all these places and several more. In other words they bring together the cases on single brief points which have been scattered by the Digesters. One editor recently in preparing a note on a question relating to the validity of a certain form of lease, found a recent case, exactly in point, classified under "Mining Law" and nowhere else.

IF you are not using L.R.A. on every question, do so. It pays. If you want suggestions and help as to how to do so, write us.

A 600 page "Desk Book for Brief Makers" is yours for asking. Send only 25 cents to pay delivery.

ON REAL PROPERTY

BY

Raleigh C. Minor, M. A., B. L.

Professor of Law, University of Virginia,

AND

John Wurts, M. A., M. L.

Professor of Law, Yale University.

For any law school to undertake to teach the changes in the law of Real Property that have been made in all the states is plainly neither possible nor desirable. Instructors and students have heretofore labored under the disadvantage of being obliged to use text books on Real Property that have been prepared for general sale among the lawyers of many different states. Statements as to what the law is in this, that, and the other state, only distract and confuse the students and throw an intolerable burden on the instructor.

Every page, every paragraph, of this book has been written for the law student. It states the common law of Real Property, showing wherein it has been repealed in this country as contrary to our fundamental laws and the spirit of our institution, and sets out such statutory changes as are common to all states.

A Complete and Thorough Treatise on Contracts for American Lawyers

WALD'S POLLOCK ON CONTRACTS

Third American from the Seventh English Edition

By SAMUEL WILLISTON.

Professor of Law in Harvard University

Principals of Contract at Law and Equity. Being a Treatise on the General Principles Concerning the Validity of Agreements, with a Special View to the Comparison of Law and Equity. By Sir Frederick Pollock. Third American from the Seventh English Edition. Prepared by Samuel Williston, Professor of Law in Harvard University.

In one Large, Compactly Printed Volume of 1,140 Pages

Price $6.00 net, or $6.40 delivered

THE text and notes of the latest English edition are reprinted in full, and such additions are made as seemed to the editor necessary to make the work a complete and thorough treatise on the Law of Contracts for the use of American lawyers and students. To this end the book is elaborately annotated throughout with American notes. The American notes contain not only an exhaustive collection of American decisions, but in many cases also a discussion of the principles involved.

Furthermore, LARGE ADDITIONS HAVE BEEN MADE TO THE TEXT by Professor Williston to supply a treatment of topics omitted or inadequately treated by the English author. A full discussion of the American Law of Contracts for the benefit of third persons, of repudiation of contracts, and of the discharge of contracts by release, rescission, alteration, etc., has in this way been added. These additions to the text aggregate about 150 pages.

The authors of the work. It can safely be said that no author of the present day, either in England or America, holds higher rank, or is better and more favorably known as a law writer than Sir Frederick Pollock, the author of the English edition of this book. The late Professor Wald, editor of the former American edition of this work, was one of the leading lawyers of the Ohio bar, and was also for many years Dean of the Cincinnati Law School and instructor there in the law of contracts. Professor Samuel Williston, of Harvard University, the editor of this new edition of Pollock on Contracts, has been for the last fifteen years the instructor in law of contracts at Harvard Law School, and has attained a national reputation as an authority on the subject. During this long period he has been collecting material which he has used in preparing the new edition of this work, now offered to the legal profession.

No American treatise on the law of contracts has been written by such eminent authorities on the subject as those whose names are connected with this work as authors.

WILLISTON'S WALD'S POLLOCK ON CONTRACTS is not a work by an unknown author, or one of but little reputation, but it is the product of the brains and labor of men of national and international reputation as law writers and instructors in the law of contracts. It is a thorough and complete treatise on the subject for the American practitioner, and has the great merit of being complete in one large, compactly printed volume.

Bispham Principles of Equity

Late Professor of Equity Jurisprudence, University of Pennsylvania

Edited by SHARSWOOD BRINTON, of the Philadelphia Bar

Price $6.00 Net; Canvas Binding.

IN the preparation of the present edition of this standard text-book, the treatise has been carefully revised. The references to decisions, both English and American, have been brought down to the date of going to press.

The publishers feel assured that in presenting this volume to the legal profession, they will be offering a new edition of a well known work on a most important branch of the law, which will tend to increase its high reputation for usefulness, both to the student and to the practitioner, which it has heretofore enjoyed and steadily maintained.

Attention is called, so far as students are concerned, to the fact that from no other modern work can such a brief, clear and comprehensive statement of the rise and development of Equity Jurisprudence be obtained; while the value of Mr. Bispham's book to the practitioner as a practical treatise on chancery law is applied to the solution of business problems of the present day, will be apparent from even a cursory examination. This is particularly so upon such subjects as Trusts, Trade Marks, Commercial Trusts, Strikes, Mortgages, and Maxims in Equity, in the last of which topics, the fundamental principles upon which Chancery Jurisdiction is based have been expressed.

HALSBURY'S "LAWS OF ENGLAND"

BY

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF HALSBURY,

Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain,

1885-86, 1886-92, 1895-1905.

The purpose of this entirely new work is to supply in a convenient and easily accessible arrangement the WHOLE body of English Law.

The general scheme of the work was planned by LORD HALSBURY, and is being carried out under his direction. The co-operation of the most Eminent Judges and Lawyers of the day has been secured.

In completeness and accuracy this work exceeds anything before attempted. Instead of piling case upon case, and statute upon statute, the aim is, as far as possible, to deal with every branch of the law, giving a concise yet full and clear statement of the law, supported with references to decisions, authorities and statutes.

It deals fully and authoritatively with all the various branches of the Laws of England. Unusual and out-of-the-way points, too often neglected by the ordinary text writer, receive special attention.

The character of the work is essentially practical, while completeness and accuracy are its distinguishing features.

At a glance you can find the whole law of England upon a given subject, and thus save the time wasted in consulting the full reports themselves of the numerous judicial decisions (frequently conflicting).

The various subjects are dealt with by specialists whose names carry with them the weight of authority.

There is an Index, Table of Statutes and Table of Cases to each Volume, and a Consolidated Index to the entire work will form the last Volume.

The work is to be completed in 22 volumes, of which 10 are now issued in buckram binding, and will be supplied at the exceedingly moderate price of $7.50 per volume. Upon request to do so, we will forward for inspection the volumes now published.
